Note Your image will appear in a `.png` format, which may cause problems when using the `.html` format. You can use either the `File` menu, or the Tab key to switch to the Edit tab. Now you're ready to start working with the program. 3. When the Edit tab is highlighted, click the Edit drop-down menu and choose the Select tool. Now your cursor changes to a selection tool with a yellow dot over the top of it, as shown in Figure 1-15. Click in the image and drag it to the right, a small square appears at the bottom corner of your image, and the width of your selection is at the number 3, as shown in Figure 1-16. Click and drag a second time to expand the selection beyond the image. Your selection should look like the one shown in Figure 1-17. Figure 1-15. The Select tool lets you draw a selection using any pattern, or you can specify an exact area to select by clicking and dragging the dotted-line symbol. The dotted line will follow the mouse cursor. Figure 1-16. When you drag with the Select tool, a small square indicates the current selection area. The selection area is displayed at the bottom-right corner of your image canvas. Figure 1-17. You can crop, resize, rotate, and flip your image after you select it with the Select tool.

This article will guide you through the process of creating a beautiful photo in Photoshop Elements using the advanced tools and techniques found in the following chapters. We will also help you understand the art of taking quality photos, explain how photographers, web designers and graphic designers use Photoshop, and offer useful tips to help you improve your photos with Photoshop Elements. A Brief History of Photoshop Photoshop was founded in 1984 by Thomas Knoll as a platform for design professionals and experts. It was designed to reduce design time and was made available to the public in 1987. In 1999 the company was acquired by the present-day Adobe. This was a turning point for Photoshop. Many new features were added to make the program easier to use for beginners, and advanced users could take advantage of the full power of the graphics software. In the past, Photoshop users had to rely on a combination of trial and error, and knowledge of the tools available in the program, to be able to create high-quality images. Today, Photoshop and its powerful tools are used by most professionals and hobbyists. WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said Tuesday that the Trump administration is considering different options, including those in the Iran nuclear deal, to address the question of whether Iran is still abiding by the accord. “We are in discussions with the Congress,” Pompeo said on “Fox News Sunday.” “We think it's important that we have, not only this process of the fundamental review, but also that we reinforce it with additional partners, like the Saudis, the Emiratis. And so we are going to be looking at everything that we can do.” Pompeo said that President Trump is hopeful “this is the best path forward to make sure that we're going to retain the agreement.” “The president has been very clear about the fact that we will withdraw from the [nuclear deal],” he said. “We will do additional things to preserve our defense posture, so that's not going to change.” Asked whether Trump wants to walk away from the Iran accord, Pompeo said: “The president has said it at every opportunity, his direction to me, that he wants us to take it off the table.” By walking away from the deal, Pompeo said Trump could see a second wave of Iran's development of nuclear weapons, a point that was emphasized in a statement released by the administration. The sanctions on Iran were the strongest sanctions ever approved by Congress, a fact Pompeo said was underscored by the U.S.' allies in the region. “[The statements] are really a recognition that the sanctions have been working and in fact there's been a little over 100 [I]ranian centrifuges, shut down by the Europeans,” he said. “We're concerned about what's going to happen next, what will Iran do next in terms of its nuclear program.” “The sanctions are working, so we're going to continue those, we're going to get those enhanced,” Pompeo said. “We're going to continue working with our partners in the region to make sure that we are absolutely sure Iran never gains a nuclear weapon.” Pompeo also said he is hopeful that the demonstrations in Iran can turn into a democratic movement. “The idea that this is somehow something that is the end game for Iran, that somehow we

U.S. National Team opens campaign vs. Cuba August 16, 2012|Reuters RAPID CITY, S.D. Not even a week into his first training camp with the United States men's national team, Kyle Beckerman has already come up against a part of the program that isn't easy: the tropical, nonstop schedule. After 12 years of consistently playing games against European opponents, the San Francisco midfielder spent the past week poring over a four-page document called "practices and games" to make sure he knew what was expected of him come Tuesday against Cuba, the first of what will be 18 matches over 10 days for the team. The preparation is about more than knowing what day and time it is; it's also about finding the right balance of practice and game. "It's a lot of legwork, but at the same time I know going into this camp the work that I did this summer, I'm in a good place," Beckerman said after Monday's morning session. "You just have to make sure you don't do too much and get too out of shape. You've just got to focus on making sure you keep up the intensity." With the U.S. hosting a team of top domestic players like Columbus Crew midfielder Wil Trapp and Washington's Jozy Altidore, who the Americans will also play in the Aug. 19 CONCACAF Gold Cup title match, there is a different feel for every camp. The players are on a different level and have different attitudes, from the dour-faced Trapp, who played the past two years for the Crew, to Altidore, who is brimming with excitement at the prospect of getting back on a major stage like the Gold Cup. The camp's first game against Cuba is also one of the most inviting in recent history, with the event taking place in the brand new PPL Park, the home of the Philadelphia Flyers. The U.S. traditionally opposes Cuba only in exhibition games, but the Americans will face the island nation in its 2013 Gold Cup qualifying and then-2014 World Cup qualifying match. So for the first week, Beckerman will get a head start on his much anticipated rematch with Altidore, who leads the current scoring race with five goals. Beckerman's rivalry with Altidore dates back to when the two played together at Arsenal, when Altidore was just finishing his rookie season in England
